Beach Shows

By JAY LLOYD

Rex Beach's knowledge of the North was not entirely darwn from imagination.

Every year—until interrupted by World War II—he hunted in the wilds north of Ottawa.

Latterly his guide was the same man, who was devoted to him. This arose out of an incident on the first occasion they met.

Baptiste's favorite joke was to take a tenderfoot on a fishing expedition such a distance away, and at such a pace, that when he returned he literally had tender feet. It was unknown for him to assist his victim for the last mile or so before he collapsed.

Beach is a huge man with a corporation in proportion. Baptiste had heard that he was to guide a man who wrote stories about the North, two-fisted yarns of the wilderness.

VERY EASY

"Dis is h'eesay," he confided to another member of the party who Baptiste knew from previous visits, saying that he would take Beach out alone and make him rue the day he thought he knew something about the woods.

—Central Press Canadian

Before the presidential elections in the U.S., it seemed to many observers that Harry Truman was the only one confident that Truman would be re-elected. But here he is ready for another term behind the White House eecutive deck.

The next morning Baptiste and Beach started early for a favorite fishing hole, known only to the guide (he said). Late that night neither had returned.

Just as other members of the party were starting out to search for them, fearing that Beach had collapsed and he was too heavy for Baptiste to carry, they perceived a figure walking up the darkened path towards the cabin with something in his arms.

GUIDE GIVES IN

When the man got far enough for him to be identified by a flashlight, the party were startled to see that it was Rex Beach. They were even more surprised to perceive that the bundle he was carrying was Baptiste!

The guide later confessed that he had tried to maintain a pace which Beach would not be able to keep, but finally not only did he have to slow down but he was seized with cramps and couldn't walk at all. By easy stages, Beach must have carried him several miles to the cabin.

No one since has been able to question Beach's right to say anything he pleases, or to write what he likes, about the great outdoors while Baptiste is around!

FRED'S STONY STARE

Beach's visits to Ottawa were so regular, and he said so little (even among friends he is no conversationalist) that I soon gave up seeking to get an interview. This got me in a bit of difficulty with Fred Stone.

While Beach had introduced me, I didn't catch his name. I started to leave without speaking more than half a dozen words to him. Stone was shocked.

"Don't you want a story from me?" he asked.

"Who are you?" I smiled as I questioned, just in case he might be somebody.

He was shocked still further when I was not properly impressed by his name. Fred Stone, probably one of the most versatile artists the American stage produced, was better-known then than he is now, as he had just started making making motion pictures, and his daughter, Paula, had come into some stage production also. Yet, truthfully, I had never heard of him.

An old-timer on our staff was shocked as Stone was when I confessed it.

Anyway, Fred Stone gave me a good story. From then on, I was more careful about Rex Beach's hunting guests.

Trans-Canada Domestic Fares Not To Increase

MONTREAL.—There will be no increase in the Trans-Canada Air Lines domestic fares and rates owing to Canadian dollar devaluation, it was stated by G. R. McGregor, President of the Company, on his return from London, Saturday.

He added that there will be little or no change in fares between Canada and the United States but an increase in international fares to the sterling area of approximately ten per cent and also an increase in fares quoted in setrling from the sterling area countries to Canada of approximately twenty-five per cent, all subject to approval by the Canadian Air Transport Baord.

These arrangements are of temporary nature, McGregor said, and it is expected that the whole problem will be dealt with in detail at the meetings of the International Air Transport Association conferences to be held at Mexica City in November.

McGregor also stated that any tickets bought prior to midnight September 23 for travel beginning prior to October 30 will be honored.

There is now considerable saving in carrying out the greater part of a trans-continental air journey in Canada, he said. Up to the present time it has been slightly cheaper to travel, for example, Vancouver-New York, by going first to Seattle and thence by U.S. airlines to New York.

Fishing and hunting parties make a serious mistake by overloading their craft or by using too small a boat for the size of the party, for when in rough water, the craft will easily overturn.

---

Animals with long legs also have long neck in order to reach their food without bending their knees.

DON'T BURN STRAW

The dry windy spell of last spring brought home to many farmers the advantages of trash cover, but the lesson seems to have been forgotten already. Too many people are burning combine straw and much of their standing stubble. This valuable material should be saved by proper use of a one-way disc, blade or cultivator. If a straw spreader has been used on the combine there should be little difficulty in working the soil either through or under this mulch. The benefits gained by conservation of soil and water, and by improved soil fertility and structure, make the saving of the straw essential.

To obtain the greatest benefit from his straw, the soil should be broken to a depth of two to three inches and as much of the straw as possible left on the surface. Experiments have shown that on rolling land the application of two tons of straw, per acre on the surface plus the breaking of the soil crust, will reduce both run-off and soil erosion to about 2 per cent of that on crusted fields. Although such a tremendous saving cannot be expected on every field, great improvement can invariably be obtained simply by utilizing this valuable by-products of our grain farming.

SWINE CARE

A. J. Charnetski, Livestock Supervisor, Alberta Department of Agriculture, points out that our hog troubles in the fall usually begin with a break in the weather. Rapid changes in temperature, accompanied by cold winds, very often cause sickness from colds and similar complaints.

To prevent losses due to sudden climatic changes, sleeping quarters for swine should be repaired and bedding provided while the weather is still good. For brood sows due to farrow this fall, care should be taken that the bedding is fairly free from Canada thistles. The thistles get into the sow's udders and nipples, and cause intense discomfort when suckling her pigs. In some areas considerable losses in new born pigs have been reported from this cause.

LOCAL JR. CLUB JUDGING TEAMS GO TO OLDS

Buckley and Perry Godwin formed the junior club judging team to represent this area in the Provincial Junior Club Judging Competitions held at Olds on September 29 and 30. Sixty-six teams of boys and girls representing both junior clubs and girls' clubs from the Peace River area to the international boundary participated in these competitions. Winning teams in five different classes will represent Alberta in the Canadian judging events to be held in Toronto early in November. While the local boys did not win the trip to Toronto, they placed third in the grain judging event against sixteen other teams. Donald Peters and Shirley Jones of the Lakeview Dairy Calf Club from Fallis were sixth out of ten teams competing in the dairy cattle judging section. Evelyn Reich and Olga Mastaller of Fallis competed in the clothing judging section of the events for girls' clubs.

"Bargain Sale" In World Trade

MONTREAL. — "A gigantic bargain sale of goods and services to the dollar area" as a result of recent sterling area currency devaluation, is forecast by the Bank of Montreal in its September business review, issued last week.

The bank points out that the "sudden spate of devaluation, after protracted official resistance to the step, reflects a belated and salutary admission that price is once more a vital factor in determining the volume and direction of international trade."

Despite Sir Stafford Cripps' statement that the rate of sterling can always be raised "if events prove that we have gone down a bit too low," the B of M believes the stage is set for what it terms "a gigantic bargain sale."

"In this regard it has been pointed out that, mathematically, the very process of marking down to $2.80 a sterling area article which formerly cost the U.S. buyer $4.03 would mean an equivalent reduction in the sterling area's dollar earnings. In terms of reality, however, it would be misleading to conclude that unless the volume of goods moving to U.S. markets is increased by an amount more than proportionate to the devaluation, the great experiment will be futile," the bank stresses. "Other factors, notably the extent to which imports from the dollar area may be reduced and the strong possibility of shifts in relative prices in the areas affected also enter into the question."

DEVALUATION POSES SERIOUS PROBLEMS

Pointing out some steps necessary to ensure a larger share of dollar earnings for the sterling area, the bank stresses that "the advantages of devaluation could be quickly dissipated by a recurrence of the inflationary processes of the wage-price spiral, and more slowly but none the less surely devitalized by national policies which impede the fullest possible play of individual incentives.

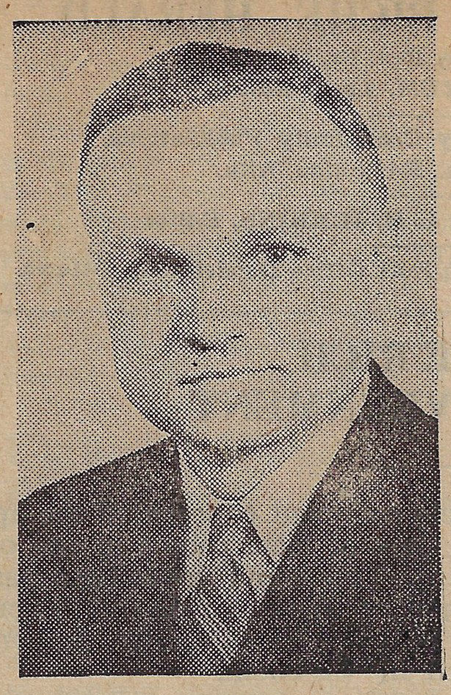

"It need hardly be added that this new and realistic effort to bridge the dollar gap requires also a willingness on this side of the Atlantic to accept the flow of goods that must be forth-coming from overseas if a balance is to be restored. The situation in this regard presents a challenge to North American sincerity and understanding."

CANADIAN DEVALUATION "REASONABLE COMPROMISE"

Turning to the question of the devaluation of the Canadian dollar, the review states that "the Canadian action has not been one of readjustment of a grossly overvalued currency but rather a deliberate attempt to effect a reasonable compromises consistent with the realities of our own position as a creditor nation vis a vis the sterling area and a debtor in respect of current account transactions with the United States."

The bank suggests that, generally speaking, "the result should be that the contrary balances in our transactions with the two major currency areas, which cannot be offset under conditions of inconvertibility, should at least be reduced in size."

Finally, the B of M stresses the "undeniable fact that Canada faces the transitional period with very great underlying advantages in terms of a vigorous and expanding industrial structure, a relatively low level of costs and with important new accomplishments well under way in the development of natural resources."

BETTER CITIZENS BE RICH THAN JUST THE GOVERNMENT

There has been considerable comment concerning the apparent lack of interest in the part of local people in the oil discoveries and development in the Leduc and Redwater areas. Aside from mushroom development in the towns of Devon, Leduc and Redwater there is no evidence of the excitement which usually is associated with an "oil boom."

The reason for this is not too hard to find. It is simply that people don't usually get too excited about something which does not affect them directly. And as far as the average citizen of this province is concerned he has a little difficulty in feeling that this oil development benefits him directly.

It is easy to understand the excitement which has always accompanied similar oil discoveries in the United States. There mineral rights are tied to surface rights and the discovery of oil has made millionaires overnight out of those who owned the surface, and therefore owned the mineral rights as well. Even the most phlegmatic Western Canadian farmer would get excited at the prospect of becoming a millionaire overnight.

On the other hand mineral rights here are not tied to the surface. The government owns most of the mineral rights, the C.P.R. and the Hudson's Bay Company own most of what the government doesn't own, while there are a few individuals who are fortunate enough to own their mineral rights, and many of these disposed of them to oil speculators before they realized their value. There have, of course, been a very few spectacular exceptions. But in the Redwater area none of the farmers hold the mineral rights.

This means then that the discovery of oil does not mean sudden prosperity to our citizens. It means good fortune for the oil companies, for a few speculators, and for the provincial government. To the farmer whose land is invaded for drilling purposes it means generous rentals—but very few farmers consider these rentals adequate compensation for the many inconveniences which they feel they are subjected to.

Money in the provincial treasury may benefit all of us —but too indirectly, and too little per person to give anyone cause for excitement. Like the South American republics, oil discoveries have made the government rich, but have not meant much to the average citizen. Perhaps Albertans would be more excited if our system of handling mineral rights was patterned after the American, rather than the South American system.

Perhaps our farmers would be more excited if they were to receive a reasonable royalty on the oil withdrawn under their farms. Certainly they would then have the money we need to enable us to participate in the development of our province. At present we depend on outside capital—which of course will drain off the profits.

Our government might we well advised to consider the benefits the American system has bestowed on the whole of the American economy. It seems better to have a rich people, rather than just a rich government.

CIVILIZING THE ARCTIC

Denmark is introducing radios, white porcelain electric stoves, flatirons, etc., into Greenland.

The U.S.A. navy is experimenting with aluminum "igloos" at Point Barrow, Alaska. The aluminum structures are covered with resin-impregnated paper between thin sheet-aluminum, which gives a strong, light and highly-insulated wall to shut out blizzards.

If improvement in Arctic living conditions continues, the old saw about selling refrigerators to Eskimos will no longer be a joke.

TOO MANY NATIONAL WEEKS

Any time an editor runs out of material he may always obtain a few lines by looking up what national week is being observed.

Last week it was fire prevention; the week before, newspapers; this week it is "National Oil Progress Week" and "National Navy Week." There is a connection—but that probably was coincidental.

In fact, if we wanted to look far enough, Hawaii is celebrating "Aloah Week," and the U.S.A. "National Businesswomen's Week." Three weeks ago it was "National Salmon Week."

It was bad enough when special observance days were cluttering up the calendar, but with one full week supposed to be given over to homage of such a miscellany, the national week is in danger of defeating its own purpose of special public attention. They are becoming so common—and a few of them so inconsequential—the public will come to pay no attention to any of them.

Contradictory Scare Stories Promote Suppressed Anxiety

Peace-time scare-story writers must be working overtime these days. Is their propaganda beginning to affect the outlook of the ordinary man?

Travelling around Alberta I get the impression that people and conditions are too quiet to be normal.

If I were required to produce evidence, I couldn't do so. It is something intangible, something which makes you search for words to express it. It is more suppressed anxiety than quiet frustration.

Possible this A-bomb world has seeped more deeply even than most persons believe. Until our own generation the average man thought about world affairs only when he was compelled to, when it affected his own family life.

Now everyone seems to be waiting for either a war or depression. Meanwhile they would like to enjoy the daily round of living but can't quite settle down to it. It is far from the eat-drink-and-be-mery-for-tomorrow-we-die type of thing; it is more an uneasy fear of an unknown future, or even more acutely, that the pleasant present can't last.

From what I read in newspapers and magazines these days, this would appear to be a world condition. What intrigues me, however, is that writers are not satisfied with elaborating on the atom bomb horrors, but (pseudo scientists in particular) are assembling a conglomeration of facts as a jumping off place for dire predictions. Some of these alleged facts are incongruously contradictory.

For instance, this business of a new "heat" age or a new "ice" age.

Recently the Associated Press carried a story quoting a group of scientists who predicted a new dark ages.

The burden of their reasoning was that the world had gone through a succession of cold and more temperate waves. The last era of the temperate climate was during the dark ages. Because heat produced lassitude, we were due for another dark ages in thinking and culture.

Now the current issue of the magazine "Pagent" contains an article which states another ice age is almost upon us. The weight of ice at the South Pole is at a danger point where it will capsize the earth. From evidence of the earth's layers, the average age of previous epochs was less than 8,000 years, and recorded history of present civilization is 7,500 years. Every race has a legend of a great flood; geological evidence indicates the earth has capsized many times before—so the argument runs.

We are due for a rough time whether we get heat or cold.

Until the immediate post-war period, the sociological thinking fashion was to describe this as a world of plenty. Recently this has radically changed to a deluge of propaganda that the population increase is far out-running resources necessary to sustain life adequately.

A correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, writing from Paris, reported world production was falling off. He predicted semi-starvation in Europe and absolute in more impoverished areas.

The annual report of Canada Packers Limited (to cite only one authority) stated the countries of Europe were now becoming self-sustaining, that Canada could no longer profit so greatly in foreign markets, and that price declines must be expected, particularly in farm products.

Either way it's bad.

It seems to be that it is too easy to take the pessimistic view these days. The accomplishments of the United Nations are neglected in the fear the United Nations itself will not continue. The measure of co-operation is not being regarded as a step to further improvement but as a faltering forward to the abyss of non-continuance.

The almost incredible accomplishment—to a pre-war world—of a Parliament of Europe went almost unnoticed.

That Russia some day would have the atom bomb was a foregone conclusion from the time the first bomb devastated Hiroshima. At no time was the west in graver danger of war with Russia than when the war with Germany had just ended. This is a known fact.

Before every war some persons have predicted it would mean the end of the world. Yet the world has managed to survive. During every peace-time period, persons have predicted the end of the world, or some overwhelming catastrophe.

As a province Alberta never had such rosy prospects for the future. Thinking in world-terms is all right in its place, but we would be better off today if we thought in terms of our province and let world affairs take care of themselves.

A little seasoning of optimism in our outlook is good business, for it would produce more business. It would at least make all easier to get along with.

And that would certainly be a blessing.

Softly Does It

My thanks to Mr. Jenkins for his "one-man campaign" against merchants who charge more than 5c for soft drinks. The Coca Cola company, when it was trying to use pressure on the government to take off the tax, ran full page ads saying that the drink was always intended to be 5c, that the merchants wished to have it sold at that price, and all that prevented it was a nuisance tax. Why doesn't the company now get after those merchants who failed to reduce and even more particularly those who charge 10c?

I eat all my meals in restaurants. For years I've put up with dirt, poor service and inferior food without complaint, but this business of charging 10c extra for tea, coffee or milk really gets under my skin.

What annoys me most is the attitude of some waitresses if you say you don't wish anything to drink—they make you feel like a cheapskate. It so happens I prefer to have my drink with dessert, and not only do I get a funny look when I say "later, please," but in some cases I'm practically hounded until I do order.

One would think I was cheating them out of their profit by refusing to comply with their racket for extra charge. Are we customers soft touches, or is it merchants who should be "softened up?"

Fed Up!
Smoky Lake, Alta.

Fully Agreed

I'm pleased to learn that at least one newspaper in Edmonton is ready to say a good word for our city administration. I've felt for some time a body of public-spirited citizens were getting "a tough ride" they didn't really deserve.

Long Hours, Small Profit

If you think the restaurent business is a racket, why don't you try it for a while and take the long, hard hours and small profit? Certain towns charge extra for soft drinks because they have to pay extra freight charges. As for charging for drinks extra to a meal, that is a custom which grew up during the war and has been continued under post-war high prices. It is true that it makes the customer feel he is not paying a higher price for a meal, which is good psychology.

Restaurant Proprietor.

Publish Offenders' Names

While I can understand charging 10c for soft drinks at charity affairs — or even at exhibitions — where customers know they are expected to shell out money for the good of the cause, I've never been able to understand why merchants take the chance of antagonizing their customers for the sake of a couple of extra cents. Nor why the public has let them get away with it for so long without protest.

Probably if you published the names of all offenders it might serve to bring them to their senses?

Meeting Elects Board of Four

HYLO. — On Oct. 13 a meeting for the Hylo Hamlet cemetery was held in the Hylo Sr. classroom and although again the attendance was not too commendable, a board of four, two representatives for each of the Catholic and Protestant portions, was elected by acclamation.

The board now consists of Mr. S. Grandish, Mr. A. Marini, Mr. Peter Tymchuk and Mr. James Simon.

Mrs. Mary Grandish continues to act as temporary secretary-treasurer until the board appoints a permanent one.

Mr. Pete Ferion moved that every man or head of household turn out on Oct. 20, a Thursday, at about 8:30 a.m., on the cemetery grounds with a sharp axe to clear the plot, since it seems impossible to collect enough for the brush-cutting and breaking as well. Everyone approved the motion and everyman available is expected to turn out.

HYLO NEWS

Obituary

Mrs. Lottie Stevens Grandinetti

HYLO. — Mrs. Lottie Stevens Grandinetti departed into the life beyond on Oct. 4, 1949 in the St. Catherine's hospital at Lac la Biche where she has been a patient for over two months. She leaves to mourn, her husband, Mr. Sam Grandinetti, one daughter, Donnie, one son Michael, all of Hylo.

Mrs. Lottie Grandinetti was born in Calender, Ont., in 1899.

She was one of a family of 14 brothers and sisters. She married in Calender and later moved to Fort Frances, Ont., where her son, Michael was born. The family of three moved west when Michael was only a wee boy. They lived in Edmonton for two or three years and 20 years ago moved to their farm in Hylo where they have resided and where Donnie was born.

Mrs. L. Grandinetti was very fond of sewing and always took pride in dressing her dear daughter and son.

Mrs. Grandinetti's illness dates back to four years ago when she underwent a minor operation for a tumor. Although a minor one, it left her weaker and she suffered reoccurring attacks. Six months ago, in March, she became ill with a cold but was unable to recover as her weakened condition gave way to that dreaded disease cancer and she suffered much within her last two months of life. She was a very cheerful patient, and all her bedside visitors always felt eased of their troubles after a chat with her.

Interment took place on Oct. 5 in the Lac la Biche Catholic cemetery from St. Catherine's church. Rev. Father McGrane officiated. Mr. Wm. Blacklock of Athabasca took care of funeral services.

CHARRON NEWS

CHARRON.—Richard Labonte is the proud owner of a brand new G.M.C. truck. He says it is the best vehicle for a farm.

Urban Gauthier drove Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gauthier and their son Roland to Edmonton on Saturday, Oct. 8. Clifford was admitted to the Royal Alexander hospital for treatment of his back which has been bothering him for some time. Roland and Urban came back Sunday, Oct. 9, but Doria stayed with relatives in Edmonton for a few days.

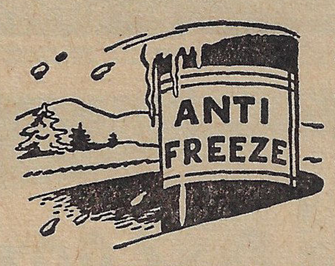

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Labonte, accompanied by Louise Gauthier, also motored to Edmonton October 8 to attend the Rosary Crusade. Mrs. Labonte also paid a short visit to her sister Mrs. Fred Tardif. It was Louise's first trip to the city. She thought it was simply wonderful.

The Rosary Crusade was very well attended in spite of rough roads. I never saw so much traffic and people in years.

Mr. D. A. McKay of Waskatenau, was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Labonte.

I presume you farmer wives have all finished taking in your gardens and your canning is all done, and now your hands are a mess, aren't they? Well don't just look at them in horror and try to hide them when company comes. Here's a very economical and simple recipe I've found very effective:

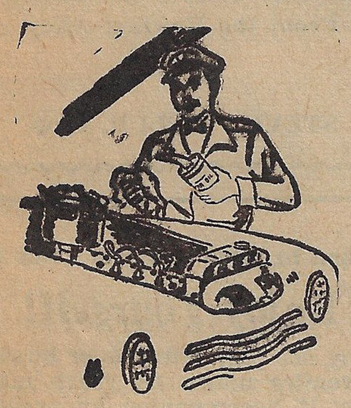

Two drams tragacanth gum (in powdered form), 2 ozs. glycerine, 1 pint soft water, 1-4 oz. tincture benzoin. (I add piece of one lemon instead). Add a few drops of perfume if you wish. Soak tragacanth overnight in soft water. In the morning add other ingredients beat with egg beater, then bottle. It's cheap enough to use real often and just see if your hands won't soon be hands you can be proud of.

It's An All Wind

THORHILD.—John W. Olinyk, Thorhild farm machinery dealer and garage proprietor, claims to have encountered that ill wind that did nobody any good. At least it did him no good until the present moment.

It appears that Mr. Olinyk sold John Selasky, a district farmer, a tractor with an umbrella to protect him from the elements. After a recent storm—which incidentally did the crops no good—it was reported in The Tribune that the umbrella had been destroyed.

"I checked with Mr. Selasky and it didn't have the smallest damage," Mr. Olinyk reported.

It took more than a Big Wind to make a big dent in his umbrella. It was wind all right, but from the wrong source, which produced the story.

The Big Value Spreader for Small Farms

New Features and New Improvements in a Lightweight, Light Draft, Two-Horse Spreader.

The manure spreader occupies a very important place among the implements which have proved of great economic worth to the farmer.

The time and labor saved through its use make it a good investment, but a spreader is a money-maker as well as a saver—for through its use greater benefits accrue from the valuable fertilizing elements of barn-yard manure.

Plants have to make their growth upon material in their immediate vicinity. The even, thorough work of a spreader is an important factor in promoting uniform growth and maturity of your crops, and in increasing the yield. As well as providing nitrogen, phosphorous, and potash, barn-yard manure adds to the humus content of the land.

Your attention is directed to a careful survey of the features of the new Massey-Harris No. 10 Spreader. See your dealer for further information.

Rosary Crusade Rally in Radway

RADWAY. — In spite of very chilly weather a successful rally was held in Radway on Thursday, Oct. 6. However instead of open air rally as had been planned, the program culminated in the Radway hall.

At 3 p.m. a parade of elementary and high school pupils started from in front of the new school. Between the two groups, girls preceding and boys following, moved a beautiful float decorated by the Radway Ladies' Aid of St. Mary's under the direction of Miss N. Panyluk.

After the parade crossed the town the pupils entered the Radway hall and the public followed, filling the hall to capacity. Five boys and 53 girls, under direction of Rev. Fr. A. Wynnyk, OSBM, in turn lead in reciting of the prayers of the Rosary, all those assembled joining in.

After that, Mr. A. J. Styra introduced the speakers as follows:

Mr. P. Mersky, mayor of Radway, who welcomed the assembled people.

Rev. Fr. Lawrence of Smoky Lake, who made a stirring appeal to all to pledge that each family will daily pray together.

His Excellency Bishop Neil Sawaryn of the Western Apostolic Exarchate who briefly but beautifully explained the significance of the Rosary throughout nearly the whole of the past thousand years.

Then Mr. Styra on behalf of the local Crusade committee, thanked all who by their help, made the rally such a success and begged His Excellency to give all assembled his Apostolic blessing with which the program concluded.

Weekly Garden-Graph

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Canadian

Many houseplants are being moved indoors after a summer vacation outdoors, and now is a good time to take cuttings from them.

Geranium, coleus, impatien, begonia, jade plant, lantana, petunia, lemon-verbena, nasturtium, heliotrope, pansy, snapdragon and marquiete all root easily.

Geranium cuttings are made from the tip end of growing shoots. Cuttings should be about six inches long. Make a clean cut with a sharp knife or razor blade at the base immediately below a joint where a leaf grows. Roots start easily when the cut is made at a joint. When the cut is made on the stem between two joints the cutting is apt to rot.

The accompanying Garden-Graph shows a nasturtium slip planted in sand and a helitrope cutting that has rooted.

Tip cuttings of coleus, begonia of the everblooming type, lantana and impatien should be about three or four inches long. Cut with a sharp knife to avoid crushing or bruising the stem. Take off the lower leaf or two to leave a bare stem for insertion in the sand.

Ivy cuttings can be made either from the tip end of growing shoots or whole strands can be made into several cuttings, leaving two or three leaves on each piece. Put the bottom or butt end down into the rooting medium.

When the roots on a cutting are about one-half inch in length, transplant into a three-inch pot filled with two parts sharp sand, one part loam and one part humus or leafmould.

Who Pays for Advertising?

NOT THE NEWSPAPER reader, because he saves both time and money by shopping the wide selection of honest values offered through the advertising columns.

NOT THE ADVERTISER, because advertising always returns a profit when it is used correctly and consistently.

Every line of advertising in our paper is paid for by the FELLOW WHO DOESN'T ADVERTISE!. The business which the non-advertiser loses pays the cost of advertising, and ALSO returns a nice profit to the fellow who DOES ADVERTISE!

The merchant who does not advertise IS THE MAN WHO PAYS for advertising. He pays for it in the volume of business he loses—in the number of customers who buy elsewhere.

Good advertising does not cost. GOOD ADVERTISING PAYS! It brings back the original investment and profit dollars, too. Almost every store wants more business than it is getting. Hoping for more business is not as effective as inviting more business.

Advertising SAVES Money

Every once in a while somebody comes into our office and starts a discussion about the COST of advertising . . . not only in our paper but in newspapers generally . . . but, honestly, in our humble opinion advertising, particularly WEEKLY newspaper advertising, used intelligently and frequently, doesn't cost money at all.

Rather it helps move merchandise faster, permits distribution economies, provides for mass production and mass sales and ultimately lower prices, with savings both for the consumers, sellers, distributors, wholesalers and manufacturers.

Take for example the classic case of the nationally-advertised light bulb. It costs only one-fourth as much now as it did for an inferior one in 1923. Again, in 1929 the average radio set cost $135 and only a few thousand people were proud owners. Now an average set sells for about $50.00 with ownership in the millions, and so it goes. Mass production, spurred on by judicial advertising, has brought prices down.

THE LAC LA BICHE HERALD

SADIE McAULEY RAPE

(Fifth Installment of the "Strangest Murder Case on Record"

Sadie McAuley was last seen in the late afternoon of August 2. The Maritime Provinces were shocked when her ravaged body was found quite close to where she had disappeared with a man in the bush.

Although the discovery was on the ninth, it is highly improbable that the man would have taken Sadie away and then brought her back to the same spot to murder her. It was obviously a rape crime committed at the time she was lured away.

WAS PARIS AT SCENE?

If John Paris were the man, he could not have reached Truro before the morning of August 3, at the earliest. There was not an airplane in the Maritimes at the time, or if there were, should Paris have taken one it was too unusual to escape detection.

It is possible, but not probable, that he went by automobile, but in that case he would be dependent on hitch hiking, and it would likely have taken him longer than by train. In any event, evidence on one side placed him in Truro on both the second and third, and in the other, in St. John on both those dates.

Eleven-year-old Sadie left home that fatal morning with a playmate, Hattie Lavigne, to take lunch to the latter's father who was working on Douglas avenue, near Riverview Park.

After delivering the lunch, the two children went berry picking in the park. Soon a mulatto approached and gave the children a handful of berries. He stayed with the children helping to pick berries and moving in the direction of a wire fence which led to bushlands.

SADIE DISAPPEARS

When the man and Sadie reached the wire fence, the man held the wire apart and Sadie went through. Hattie testified that she called to Sadie three times, telling her she was going home and asking her to come also. She received no answer, Hattie started for home, telling Robert Elliott, whom she met on the way, that her companion had gone walking with a strange man

There is a hiatus in testimony here. It would appear that Elliott made no search, and that although notice of the disappearance of Sadie appeared in the St. John papers, no organized search was ever made of the district where she disappeard. The body was found accidentally by another berry picker, 13-year-old James Kimball. He noticed the shoulder of a body under a large stone. He told a man nearby and the latter called police.

Paris was charged with murder mainly as the result of an amazing story told to police a few days after discovery of the victim's body by Walter Humphrey of St. John, who, by his own testimony, appears to have been an accomplice of Paris in a number of petty crimes.

INCRIMINATING EVIDENCE

"Walter Humphrey," Mr. Justice Barry said at the first trial, "tells a story which is very incriminating, in fact almost conclusive."

"On August 2, he said he rowed Paris across the river, and on August 3, he saw Paris again and Paris asked him to row him across the river again. While in the boat, Humphrey testified, Paris told him what had happed in the park the previous day, and asked him to go to the park and help him 'cover up that kid'."

"If this is true," the judge remarked, "it is conclusive."

HUMPHREY CORROBORATED

Mr. Justice Barry went on to point out that Humphrey said some days later he saw Paris trying to keep out of the way of police. "There was lots of evidence corrborative of the evidence given by Humphrey with the exception of that covering the conversation in th boat."

Bulbs For Winter Flowering

By RUTH WHALEY
District Home Economist

J. H. Crossley, assistant of the Dominion Experimental Station, Saanichton, B.C., makes these suggestions for best results with your bulbs grown indoors during the winter months:

First, choose varieties that are naturally early flowering. Use only those specially noted and usually indicated as best for indoor purposes. This is important as many bulbs are best suited to garden decoration and mediocre for growing in the house.

This means in the case of tulips, such noted varieties as Brilliant Star, De Wet, Rising Sun, Murillo, Peach Blossom, White Sail, Krelage's Triumph, Van der Eerden, Golden Harvest, Wm. Pott and the Copland varieties: for hyacinths, L'Innocence, Bismark, Pink Pearl, Jan Bos, and in the case of daffodils, the popular King Alfred.

Second, select, if possible, bulbs that have grown in an "early flowering climate." This means early natural maturity and the early flowering characteristics so desirable in out-of-season culture. Bulbs grown in British Columbia are among the earliest maturing in the world.

Third, choose top grade bulbs in perfect condition and uniform in size. This generally means King Alfreds and hyacinths at least 2½ inches in diameter (1¼ inches for tulips).

Fourth, to improve flowering qualities and shorten the time required to flower by as much as two weeks, chill the bulbs by storing them dry for one month at a temperature of 48 degrees Fahrenheit.

This shoould be done as soon as the bulbs are purchased, preferably mid-August. However, a marked measure of improvement in forcing quality can be achieved by chilling for a month by starting in the first half of September.

Fifth, after thirty days chilling, pot the bulbs in a friable mixture of about equal parts loam, sand and old compost or peat. Add no fertilizer.

Sixth, water thoroughly and store in a dark basement where the temperature should remain at 48 degrees F. This temperature is most satisfactory for root development. Fluctations in temperature and tendency for the soil to dry during the essential rooting period are undesirable—both reflect in the final results. By the 10th to the middle of December the pots should be full of roots which is a sign that then and not until then the pots may be shifted to the coolest part of the living-room.

In about a week, warmer conditions are desirable but the temperature should not rise above 68 degrees F. before the buds are well colored.

If February and March flowering is desired, keep the pots in the basement at 48 degrees F. until aobut four weeks before the required flowering date. In addition, chilling should be omitted and later planting and late flowering varieties should be the rule.

A Long Search

A United States plant explorer has already arrived in Africa to search for Strophanthus, the tropical poison-arrow plant, which holds some promise in the treatment of arthritis and rheumatism. But it will take months of collecting seed and stem cuttings for propagating purposes, and seed and roots for chemical analysis. He will search Liberia, and Ivory Coast, the Gold Coast, Togo, Danomey, Nigeria, and the Cameroons. Basic stock will be propagated in Liberia until the most valuable types have been discovered.

If Strophanthus continues to show promise as a source of the substance considered valuable for treating arthritis and rheumatism, the United States Department of Agriculture proposes to make every effort to expand productions wherever the plant will grow to advantage.

Vitamin D is the rarest among ordinary foodstuffs.
